Average Response Time to Reported Sanitary Sewer Overflows Utilities

- Reports the average response time for City utilities crews to be onsite for a sanitary sewer overflow
- A sanitary sewer overflow is a breach in the containment of raw sewage. Crews are required by the state to respond within 2 hours. Response time is critical in containing the volume of spillage.

One event caused the November 2017 average response time rise significantly. All other average response times are well below the internal target of 90 minutes and the permit requirement of 120 minutes. Average response times for FY 2017-18 were slightly less than FY 2016-17, and would have been significantly lower had it not been for the November event.

• The red line on the graph is a trend line.
