

2020 Nomination Form

Application deadline: Friday, February 28 by 5 p.m.

DELIVER TO: City Hall, 101 N. Main St., Winston-Salem,
Marketing & Communications Department, Suite 336

OR MAIL TO: City of Winston-Salem,
Marketing & Communications Department
P.O. Box 2511
Winston-Salem, NC 27102

Nominee's Stage Name: Dr. Maya Angelou Given Name: Marguerite Annie Johnson

Address at Time of Death: 2716 Bartram Road Winston-Salem State: NC

Winston-Salem Resident: Beginning: ≈ 1981 (year only) To: 2014 (year only)

Category: Music Visual Arts Dance Motion Pictures

Theater Television Writing Radio

Criteria:

- The nominee(s) exhibited sustained excellence in his or her field for at least five years.
- The nominee(s) made distinguished contributions to the community and civic-oriented participation.
- The nominee(s) is deceased (must provide copy of death certificate).
- The nominee(s) was a resident of Winston-Salem for at least five years.
- The nominee(s) made a significant contribution to the arts or entertainment industry in one or more of the following areas: music, dance, theater, writing, visual arts, motion pictures, television, or radio. A "significant" contribution would be iconic in terms of renown and the impact on the artistic disciplines or popular culture.
- Application must include nominee's performance/accomplishment biography.
- Attach nominee's biography with dates which must include at least 5 years of accomplishments in the arts, culture, or entertainment field.
- Attach a list of nominee's civic/community involvement.
- Attach a copy of nominee's death certificate.

Sponsor: Bettie E. Clay

Address: 3165 Briarcliffe Road

City: Winston-Salem State: NC Zip Code: 27106

Email: mrsclay@valleyrd.net

Phone: Home: 336.727.0402 Cell: 336.971.6383

Signature: Bettie E. Clay Date: 2.18.2020

Maya Angelou

Born: Marguerite Johnson, April 4, 1928, St. Louis, Missouri

Education: Attended public school in Stamps, Arkansas and San Francisco, California

PUBLICATIONS: AUTOBIOGRAPHIES

RANDOM HOUSE & BANTAM BOOKS

I Know Why the Caged Bird Sings, 1970 - On February 26, 1995, Bantam Books congratulated Maya Angelou for being the first African-American to be the longest-running (2 years) on The New York Times Paperback Nonfiction Best-seller list for 6 weeks in 1970 and again in 1993 after the Clinton Inauguration.

Gather Together In My Name, 1974.

Singin' And Swinging' And Getting' Merry Like Christmas, 1976.

The Heart of A Woman, 1981 - In September 1997, USA Today's "Best-Selling Book", Jumped from #83 to #11 on The New York Times Paperback Nonfiction Best-seller list and selected for Oprah Book Club.

All God's Children Need Traveling Shoes, 1986 Best-seller list on The New York Times.

A Song Flung Up To Heaven, 2002- Currently on The New York Times Best-Seller List for Hardcover Nonfiction.

MODERN LIBRARY

The Complete Collected Autobiographies of Maya Angelou, released September 2004

PERSONAL ESSAYS

RANDOM HOUSE & BANTAM BOOKS

Wouldn't Take Nothing For My Journey Now, 1993 and 1994, on The New York Times Best-seller list.

Even the Stars Look Lonesome, 1997 - Jumped from #79 to #22 on the extended list for The New York Times Paperback Nonfiction Best-seller list.

Hallelujah! The Welcome Table: A Lifetime of Memories with Recipes, The New York Times Best-seller list September 2004

Letter to My Daughter, September 2008, The New York Times Best-seller list, October to December 2008

Great Food All Day Long: Cook Splendidly, Eat Smart, released December 14, 2010

Mom & Me & Mom released April 2, 2013

CHILDREN'S BOOKS

STEWART, TABORI & CHANG

Life Doesn't Frighten Me, 1993.

CLARKSON POTTER

My Painted House, My Friendly Chicken and Me, 1994.

Kofi and His Magic, 1996.

RANDOM HOUSE, 2004

Maya's World: Izak of Lapland

Maya's World: Angelia of Italy

Maya's World: Renée Marie of France

Maya's World: Mikale of Hawaii

POETRY
RANDOM HOUSE & BANTAM BOOKS

Just Give Me A Cool Drink of Water 'Fore I Die, 1971 - Nominated for a Pulitzer Prize.

Oh Pray My Wings Are Gonna Fit Me Well, 1975.

And Still I Rise, 1978.

Shaker, Why Don't You Sing, 1983.

Now Sheba Sings the Song, 1987

I Shall Not Be Moved, 1990.

On the Pulse of Morning, Written at the request of William Jefferson Clinton for his Inauguration as the 42nd President of the United States, January 20, 1993. Published by Random House in March 1993 and was on The New York Times Best-seller list for 9 weeks.

The Complete Collected Poems of Maya Angelou 1994.

Phenomenal Woman: Four Poems for Women, 1995 Best-seller list for The New York Times.

A Brave and Startling Truth, Recited at the celebration of the 50th anniversary of the United Nations, June 26, 1995; Published by Random House in October, 1995.

From a Black Man to a Black Woman, delivered at the Million Man March in Washington, DC, October 16, 1995.

Extravagant Spirits, written in May 1997 for Life Magazine's Collector's Edition

Amazing Peace, 2005. Read by her at the lighting of the Pageant of Peace, National Christmas Tree Ceremony at the White House on December 1, 2005. Best-seller list for The New York Times in 2005.

Mother, A Cradle to Hold Me, April 2006, Best-seller list for The New York Times.

Celebrations, Rituals of Peace & Prayer, October 31, 2006, extended Best-seller list for The New York Times.

His Day Is Done, A Nelson Mandela Tribute, January 2014

PLAYS

Cabaret For Freedom, 1960 - Produced off-Broadway (in collaboration with Godfrey Cambridge).

The Least of These, 1966 - Produced in Los Angeles.

Gettin' Up Stayed On My Mind, 1967.

Ajax, 1974 - Produced in Los Angeles (Mark Taper Forum).

And Still I Rise, 1976 - Produced in Oakland, California (Oakland Ensemble Theater).

Moon On A Rainbow Shawl, 1988 - Produced in London (Author Errol John).

SCREENPLAYS

Georgia, Georgia, 1972 - Produced by Cinerama, Sweden.

All Day Long, 1974 - Produced by American Film Institute, Los Angeles.

ACTING
TELEVISION APPEARANCES

- Writer for Oprah Winfrey series "Brewster Place."
- PBS Documentaries: "Who Cares About Kids" & "Kindred Spirits" -
- KERA-TV, Dallas, TX; "Maya Angelou: Rainbow in the Clouds" - WTVS-TV,
- Detroit, MI "To the Contrary" - Maryland Public Television. Two plays for national viewing;
- Tapestry and Circles; Directed in Hollywood, 1975.
- Author of six national one half-hour programs; interviews and profiles; "Assignment America" premiered January 1975.

- Ten one-hour programs (NET-TV) "Black, Blues, Black"; National Education Television; written, produced and directed, 1968.
- Ghanaian Broadcasting Corporation, Contributor, 1963-64.
- "Afro-American in the Arts," PBS Documentary
- "Humanities Through the Arts," 30 half-hour segments.
- "Three Way Choice," CBS Miniseries; Author/Executive Producer.
- Sister, Sisters, NBC; 1982.
- "I Know Why the Caged Bird Sings," movie, CBS; co-authored; 1979.
- Two programs for the United States Information Agency; written and hosted; Part One: "The Legacy," Part Two: "The Inheritors," 1976.
- Touched By An Angel "Tree of Life" episode, November, 1995.
- "The Amen Corner" Chris/Rose Productions with Miramax (work-in-progress), 1999.
- "Down in the Delta" weekly television series (work-in-progress), 1999.
- Moesha, WB TV, August 30, 1999
- Runaway, CBS/Hallmark Movie, December 10, 2000
- "Madea's Family Reunion," movie, "Aunt May," written, directed and produced by Tyler Perry with Reuben Cannon Lion's Gate Film
- "Celebration Table: Talking & Tasting with Maya Angelou," 13 episodes, Hallmark Channel, airing 2012
-

FILMS & PLAYS

PORGY AND BESS (George Gershwin) played Ruby in European tour, 1954-55.

CALYPSO, Off-Broadway, 1957.

THE BLACKS (Jean Genet) played White Queen Off-Broadway, 1960. THE BLACKS won the Obie Award in 1961 for the best Broadway play, both American and foreign).

MOTHER COURAGE (Bertold Brecht), played title role Off-Broadway, 1964.

MEDEA (Jean Anouilh) played Nurse in Hollywood.

LOOK AWAY (Jerome Kilty) played Mrs. Keckley, Broadway, 1973.

ROOTS (Alex Haley), played Nyo Boto (Grandmother), Hollywood, 1977. (Received Emmy Nomination for Best Supporting Actress).

HOW TO MAKE AN AMERICAN QUILT, 1995, Universal Pictures.

DOWN IN THE DELTA, 1998, Miramax Films, Directorial Film Debut. Released on Video June 1999.

RECORDINGS SCORES

FOR THE LOVE OF IVY, Sidney Portier film

MISS CALYPSO, 1957, Liberty Records

GEORGIA, GEORGIA, 1972

ALL DAY LONG, 1974

MISS CALYPSO, 1996

SPOKEN WORD ALBUMS

- THE POETRY OF MAYA ANGELOU, 1969 - GWP Records.
- WOMEN IN BUSINESS, 1981 - University of Wisconsin.
- BEEN FOUND, Music & Spoken Word Album with Ashford & Simpson, 1996.

CONTRIBUTOR OF ARTICLES, SHORT STORIES & POEMS TO THESE PERIODICALS:

Black Scholar,
Essence,
California Living Magazine,

Redbook Magazine,
Ebony Magazine,
Mademoiselle Magazine,

Harper's Bazaar,
Cosmopolitan,
Life Magazine,

ADDITIONAL WORKS

THE TRUE BELIEVERS, a book of poems in collaboration with Abbey Lincoln.

ALL DAY LONG, a collection of short stories

OTHER ACCOMPLISHMENTS

- Taught modern dance at The Rome Opera House and The Hambina Theatre in Tel Aviv.
- Was the Northern Coordinator for The Southern Christian Leadership Conference - appointed by the request of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. 1959-60
- Associated Editor of the Arab Observe, Cairo, Egypt (English language news weekly) 1961-62.
- Assistant Administrator and teacher, School of Music & Drama, University of Ghana, 1963-66.
- Feature Editor of African Review, Accra, Ghana, 1964-66.
- Contributor of free-lance articles, Ghanaian Times, 1964-66.
- Contributor to Radio Ghana, 1964-66.
- Writer-in-Residence, University of Kansas in Lawrence, 1970.
- Distinguished Visiting Professor - Wake Forest University, 1974.
- Distinguished Visiting Professor - Wichita State University, 1974.
- Distinguished Visiting Professor - California State University of Sacramento, 1974.
- Appointed member of American Revolution Bicentennial Council by President Gerald Ford, 1975-76.
- Served on Jimmy Carter's Presidential Commission for International Women's Year, 1978-79.
- Appointed the First Reynolds Professor of American Studies at Wake Forest University, Winston-Salem, NC, lifetime appointment since 1981.
- Fulbright Scholar Program, 40th Anniversary Distinguished Lecturer, Liberia, 1986.
- Selected by American Council of the Arts to deliver the Nancy Hanks Lecture in Washington, D.C. on March 20, 1990.
- Panelist at Institute for The Study of Human Systems in Zermatt, Switzerland, June 1990.
- United States of America, Congressional Record, 104th Congress, House of Representatives, Tribute to Maya Angelou by the Honorable Kweisi Mfume, Maryland Congressman, 1996.
- Wrote Invocation & Benediction for "Jessye Norman Sings For The Healing of AIDS" 1996.
- Microsoft Encarta Africana Encyclopedia, presenter for The African Diaspora, 1998.
- Board of Governors, University of North Carolina, "Maya Angelou Institute for the Improvement of Child and Family Education" at Winston-Salem State University, Winston-Salem, NC, 1998.
- Talk Show Host on Oprah & Friends XM Satellite Radio, station 156, launched September 25, 2006 at NASDAQ

LANGUAGES FLUENT IN:

ENGLISH, FRENCH, SPANISH, ITALIAN, ARABIC, WEST AFRICAN FANTI

AFFILIATIONS

- Member, Director's Guild of America.
- Member, Equity.
- Member, AFTRA (American Federation Television Radio Artists).
- Advisory Board, Woman's Prison Association.
- Harlem Writer's Guild
- Member, The National Commission on the Observance of International Women's Year.
- Horatio Alger Association of Distinguished Americans.
- National Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, London, England, named a center for her, The Maya Angelou C.P.T. and Family Centre opened with her cutting the ribbon, June 20, 1992.
- Ambassador, UNICEF International, 1996.
- Member, Doctors Without Borders, New York, 1996.
- Member, W.E.B. DuBois Foundation, Inc., Amherst, MA.
- Member, Advisory Board, Bennett College, Greensboro, NC.
- Member, Advisory Board, First Commercial Bank, Little Rock, AR.
- US Holocaust Memorial Museum Committee, Washington, DC, 2001
- Member, National Society of Collegiate Scholars, Washington, DC.
- Member, Clinton Global Initiative, New York, NY

- Board of Governors, Winston Salem State University, Maya Angelou Institute for the Improvement of Child and Family Education, 1998
- Induction, National Women's Hall of Fame, 1998

HONORS & AWARDS

- * Chubb Fellowship Award - Yale University's Timothy Dwight College, 1970
- * Nominated for the National Book Award for I Know Why the Caged Bird Sings, 1970
- * Pulitzer Prize Nomination for Just Give Me a Cool Drink of Water 'Fore I Die, 1972
- * Honorary Degree - Portland State University 1973
- * Tony Award Nomination for her performance in "Look Away" 1973
- * Distinguished Visiting Professor – Wichita State University, 1974
- * Board of Trustees/American Film Institute 1975
- * Rockefeller Foundation Scholar in Italy, Scholar-in-residence at the Bellagio Study & Conference Center 1975
- * Honorary Degree - Smith College 1975
- * Honorary Degree - Mills College 1975
- * Honorary Degree - Lawrence University 1976
- * Ladies' Home Journal Award ("Woman of the Year in Communication") 1976
- * Nominated for an Emmy Award in made-for-television movie "Roots" 1977
- * Golden Eagle Award - Documentary for PBS, "Afro-American in the Arts" 1977
- * Honorary Degree - Columbia College 1979
- * Honorary Degree - Occidental College 1979
- * Honorary Degree - Atlanta University 1980
- * Honorary Degree - University of Arkansas at Pine Bluff 1980
- * Honorary Degree - Wheaton College 1981
- * Honorary Degree – Morgan State University, Baltimore, MD, 1982
- * Honorary Degree - Kean College of New Jersey 1982
- * Honorary Degree - Claremont Graduate School 1982
- * Honorary Degree - Spelman College 1983
- * Honorary Degree - Boston College 1983
- * Ladies' Home Journal "Top 100 Most Influential Women" 1983
- * The Matrix Award - Field of Books from Women in Communication, Inc. 1983
- * Honorary Degree - Winston-Salem State University 1984
- * Honorary Degree - University Brunesis 1984
- * Honorary Degree - Howard University 1985
- * Honorary Degree - Tufts University 1985
- * Honorary Degree - University of Vermont 1985
- * Honorary Degree - North Carolina School of the Arts 1986
- * Fulbright Program 40th Anniversary Distinguished Lecturer, 1986
- * The North Carolina Award in Literature (the highest honor the state bestows) 1987
- * Honorary Degree - North Carolina School of the Arts 1988
- * Honorary Degree - University of Southern California 1989
- * American Academy of Achievement's Golden Plate Award 1990
- * Candace Award, National Coalition of 100 Black Women, 1990
- * Recipient of the Langston Hughes Award presented at the City College of New York 1991
- * Distinguished Woman of North Carolina 1992
- * Essence Woman of the Year 1992
- * Horatio Alger Award 1992
- * Woman in Film, Crystal Award 1992
- * Drum Major for Justice, 1992, from The California Advocate Fresno's African American Community Newspaper
- * Honorary Degree - Northeastern University 1982
- * Inaugural Poet for President Bill Clinton 1993
- * Arkansas Black Hall of Fame 1993
- * Honorary Degree - Skidmore College 1993
- * Honorary Degree - University of North Carolina at Greensboro 1993
- * Honorary Degree - Academy of Southern Arts & Letters 1993
- * Grammy for Best Spoken Word or Non Musical Album 1993 for On the Pulse of Morning
- * Citizen Diplomat Award, 1993
- * Walk of Fame – Rollins College, 1994
- * Spingarn Award - NAACP 1994
- * Honorary Degree - American Film Institute 1994

- * Honorary Degree - Bowie State University 1994
- * Frank G. Wells Award 1995
- * Honorary Degree - University of Durham 1995
- * Grammy for Best Spoken Word or Non Musical Album, 1995 for Phenomenal Woman
- * Lifetime Membership, N.A.A.C.P., Honeywell Corporation, Minneapolis, MN 1996
- * President's Award, Collegiate of Language Association for Outstanding Achievements, Winston-Salem, NC 1996
- * Southern Christian Leadership Conference of Los Angeles & Martin Luther King, Jr. Legacy Association National Award 1996
- * The New York Black 100, Schomburg Center & The Black New Yorkers 1996
- * National Conference of Christians & Jews, Distinguished Merit Citation 1997
- * Homecoming Award, Oklahoma Center for Poets & Writers 1997
- * W.K. Kellogg Foundation, Expert-in-Residence Program 1997
- * North Carolina Woman of the Year Award, N.C. Black Publishers Association 1997
- * Presidential & Lecture Series Award, University of North Florida 1997
- * Black Caucus of American Library Association, Cultural Keepers Award 1997
- * Humanitarian Contribution Award, Boston, MA 1997
- * Honorary Degree - Shaw University 1997
- * Honorary Degree - Wake Forest University 1997
- * NAACP Image Award for Outstanding Literary Work, Even the Stars Get Lonesome, 1997
- * Alston/Jones International Civil & Human Rights Award 1998
- * Christopher Award, New York, NY 1998
- * American Airlines Audience, Gold Plaque Choice Award, Down in the Delta from Chicago International Film Festival 1998
- * City Proclamation, Winston-Salem, NC from Mayor Jack Cavanaugh 1998
- * Sheila Award, Tubman African American Museum, Macon, GA 1999
- * Special Olympics World Games, Speaker, Raleigh, NC 1999
- * Lifetime Achievement Award for Literature 1999
- * Named one of the top 100 Best Writers of the 20th Century by Writer's Digest 1999
- * Honorary Degree - Lafayette College 1999
- * Presidential Medal of Arts from President Clinton, 2000
- * Grammy for Best Spoken Word Album, 2000 for A Song Flung up to Heaven
- * Honorary Degree, Hope College, 2001
- * American Geriatrics Society's Foundation for Health In Aging Award, 2002
- * Ethnic Multicultural Media Awards (EMMAS), Lifetime Achievement, 2002
- * Honorary Degree, Columbia University, 2003
- * Honorary Degree, Eastern Connecticut University, 2003
- * 2004 Grammy nomination for "Best Spoken Word Album" for Hallelujah! The Welcome Table
- * Charles Evans Hughes Award, National Conference for Community and Justice, 2004
- * Howard University Heart's Day Honoree, 2005
- * New York Times Best Seller List, May 2006
- * John Hope Franklin Award, June 2006
- * Mother Teresa Award for her untiring devotion and service to humanity, August 2006
- * The Quill Award for Amazing Peace: A Christmas Poem, October 2006
- * Matrix Human Services, Humanitarian Contribution Award, October 13, 2006, Detroit, MI
- * Black Caucus of American Library Association, Joint Conference of Librarians of Color Author Award, 2006
- * 2007 nomination for NAACP Image Award, "Outstanding Literary Works" for Celebrations: Rituals of Peace and Prayer, award presented February 10, 2007
- * 2007 School of Nursing recommendation for honorary degree, Doctor of Humane Letters, University of Minnesota
- * The Black Academy of Arts and Letters, Inc., Dallas, TX, For Outstanding Contribution and Support to TBALL, September 23, 2007
- * Medal of Honor Award, in recognition of her work in poetry, literature, film, speaking, etc. from the Cristóbal Gabarrón Foundation, November 29, 2007, this is the first time award presented to someone outside Spain
- * 2007 50th Grammy Awards Year nomination for "Best Spoken Word Album" for Celebrations
- * Martha Parker Legacy Award, 2007
- * January 12, 2008 Inductee the International Civil Rights Walk of Fame, M.L.King, Jr. Historic Site, Atlanta, GA
- * June 1, 2008, Lincoln Medal Recipient, in recognition of her accomplishments/personal attributes that illuminate the character of President Abraham Lincoln, Washington, DC
- * Voice of Peace Award (first recipient), Hope for Peace and Justice, 2008
- * Honorary Doctor of Humane Letters, Shenandoah University, Winchester, VA, September 2008
- * Cornell Medallion, 2008
- * Gracie Allen Award (Gracie), 2008

- * The Ninth Annual Walter Dandy Orator Award, from The Congress of Neurological Surgeons, Orlando, FL, September 22, 2008
- * The Marian Anderson Award, Philadelphia, PA, November 17, 2008
- * February 7, 2009, nominations for 40th NAACP Image Awards for “Outstanding Literary Work – Non-Fiction” for Letter to My Daughter and “Outstanding Literary Work-Children,” for Amazing Peace: A Christmas Poem
- * 2008 NAACP Image Award for Letter to My Daughter, “Outstanding Literary Work – Non-Fiction” for Letter to My Daughter, February 12, 2009
- * May 2009, Honorary Degree, Kean University, Hillside, NJ
- * June 4, 2009, AWRT’s Gracie Award, Individual Achievement Award for “Outstanding Host” for the weekly XM Radio Program, the Dr. Maya Angelou Show
- * Presidential Medal of Freedom, announced November 17, 2010, receiving February 15, 2011 from President Obama
- * AARP’s Andrus Award, Washington, DC, December 9, 2010
- * Mosaic Woman Legend Award, Diversity Magazine, October 2010
- * Dignity & Respect Campaign's "Champion Award," February 2011
- * Key and Proclamation to the District of Columbia, City of Washington, May 10, 2011 presented by Mayor Vincent C. Gray
- * “I Am the Urban League” Legacy Award, Winston Salem, NC, May 20, 2011
- * Association of Black Cardiologists, Inc., "Generations Award," October 29, 2011
- * Meritorious Achievement Award, Florida A & M University, Tallahassee, FL, January 26, 2011
- * B.E.T. Television's "Literary Arts Award," aired February 13, 2012
- * Wake Forest University's "Words Awake, A Celebration of Wake Forest Writers and Writing" Hall of Fame Inductee, March 25, 2012
- * NC Writer's Network's Literary Hall of Fame, Fall 2012
- * The Heritage Registry Who's Who For Executives and Professionals 2012 edition, May 2012
- * Maya Angelou Center for Women's Health & Wellness @ Forsyth Medical Center opens June 2012
- * Inductee, North Carolina Literary Hall of Fame, a program of the North Carolina Writers’ Network, October 14, 2012
- * The Furious Flower Lifetime Achievement Award, James Madison University, October 16, 2012
- * Congressional Black Caucus, Lifetime Achievement Award, Washington, DC, September 19, 2013
- * Literarian Award for Outstanding Service to the American Literary Community, November 20, 2013
- *

2/18/2020

Author, poet, actress, and champion of civil rights Dr. Maya Angelou (1928–2014) was one of the most dynamic voices in all of 20th-century American literature. The book I Know Why the Caged Bird Sings, an autobiographical account of her childhood, gained wide acclaim for its vivid depiction of African-American life in the South.

Published in 1969, I Know Why the Caged Bird Sings established Dr. Angelou as a literary figure and opened the field of autobiography to women more generally. In the book, whose title is taken from a line in the poem “Sympathy” by Paul Laurence Dunbar, she unflinchingly tells the story of her tumultuous early life in the South. The first of seven autobiographical volumes she wrote, I Know Why the Caged Bird Sings became a best seller.

As her career progressed, the pioneering author displayed extraordinary versatility. In the 1970s alone, she released the Pulitzer Prize–nominated poetry collection Just Give Me a Cool Drink of Water 'Fore I Diiie, wrote the screenplay for the film Georgia, Georgia, received a Tony Award nomination for her role in the play Look Away, and played the role of Kunta Kinte's grandmother in the acclaimed television miniseries Roots.

In the decades that followed, she continued to write and lecture around the country. At President Bill Clinton's inauguration in January 1993, she recited “On the Pulse of Morning,” a poem she wrote for the event. Seen on television by millions, the stirring recitation further elevated her status as an American icon. The performance won a Grammy Award for Best Spoken Word Album. Dr. Angelou also received Best Spoken Word Album Grammy Awards for Phenomenal Woman in 1995 and A Song Flung Up to Heaven in 2002.

Dr. Angelou received the National Medal of Arts in 2000, and in 2011, at a ceremony in the White House, President Barack Obama awarded her the Presidential Medal of Freedom. She continued to tour, speak, write, and teach until the end of her life. Over the course of her career, Dr. Angelou was awarded more than 50 honorary degrees, released several books of essays and poetry, and had a profound influence on American culture.

Remembering Dr. Maya Angelou

🏠 / Remembrance / Family Obituary

Family Obituary

The following obituary was provided by the family of Dr. Maya Angelou.

Dr. Maya Angelou was born to Vivian Baxter and Bailey Johnson in St. Louis, Missouri on April 4, 1928. She passed to her Heavenly Reward quietly on May 28, 2014 in her home in Winston-Salem, North Carolina. She is survived by her son, daughter-in-law, two grandsons and two great-grandchildren, a nephew, a niece, grandnieces, great-grandnieces, grandnephews, great-grandnephews and a host of beloveds.

From the time she was a child, Dr. Angelou proved that she was a unique individual with amazing commitment and focus. The birth of her son when she was seventeen did not prevent her from continuing in pursuit of her dreams for a creative career. From her start as a singer in San Francisco's Purple Onion and Hungry I in 1953 to the installation of her portrait in the Smithsonian National Portrait Gallery in Washington, D.C. in 2014, she was continuously on a dramatic, musical or political stage.

She was a dancer, a singer, an actress, a poet, a writer, a magazine editor, a playwright, a film director as well as a college lecturer, full Professor and a fearless, outspoken activist. She never let her various vocations inhibit her activism or her willingness to speak out against injustice and

MEMORIAL SERVICE

A private Memorial Service was held in Wait Chapel on June 7.

» A celebration of rising joy.

» Program (PDF)

» Video

inequality. She performed in a number of major productions. She was in both the 1954 International Touring Company and the subsequent movie of Porgy and Bess. She was also in the 1977 television series of Alex Haley's Roots and in the 1995 film How to make an American Quilt. She was in too many other productions to name. She directed the films Georgia, Georgia and Down in the Delta.

Her first book, I Know Why the Caged Bird Sings, was published in 1970. She went on to write thirty-three other books including autobiographies, poetry and essays. A number of her works were best sellers and were published in number of languages.

Throughout her life Dr. Angelou's activism never flagged or waned. In 1959, during the height of the Civil Rights Movement, she headed the New York office of Dr. Martin Luther King's Southern Christian Leadership Conference. Next, she worked for the Arab Observer News Magazine in Cairo, Egypt, which was the premiere English language magazine in the Middle East. Later she moved to Ghana and met Malcolm X. She returned to the United States to work for him, but he was assassinated four days after her arrival in New York. She continued to be a voice of humanity, speaking out against anything that fettered the human spirit. Her life and her body of literary work trumpet the importance of love, tolerance and forgiveness. She was a warrior for truth, justice and love.

loading

Maya Angelou

Maya Angelou (/ˈæɪŋdʒəloʊ/ [ⓘ] [ⓘ] listen);^{[1][2]} born Marguerite Annie Johnson; April 4, 1928 – May 28, 2014) was an American poet, singer, memoirist, and civil rights activist. She published seven autobiographies, three books of essays, several books of poetry, and is credited with a list of plays, movies, and television shows spanning over 50 years. She received dozens of awards and more than 50 honorary degrees.^[3] Angelou is best known for her series of seven autobiographies, which focus on her childhood and early adult experiences. The first, I Know Why the Caged Bird Sings (1969), tells of her life up to the age of 17 and brought her international recognition and acclaim.

She became a poet and writer after a series of occupations as a young adult, including fry cook, sex worker, nightclub dancer and performer, cast member of the opera Porgy and Bess, coordinator for the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, and journalist in Egypt and Ghana during the decolonization of Africa. She was an actress, writer, director, and producer of plays, movies, and public television programs. In 1982, she was named the first Reynolds Professor of American Studies at Wake Forest University in Winston-Salem, North Carolina. She was active in the Civil Rights Movement and worked with Martin Luther King Jr. and Malcolm X. Beginning in the 1990s, she made around 80 appearances a year on the lecture circuit, something she continued into her eighties. In 1993, Angelou recited her poem "On the Pulse of Morning" (1993) at the first inauguration of Bill Clinton, making her the first poet to make an inaugural recitation since Robert Frost at the inauguration of John F. Kennedy in 1961.

With the publication of I Know Why the Caged Bird Sings, Angelou publicly discussed aspects of her personal life. She was respected as a spokesperson for black people and women, and her works have been considered a defense of black culture. Her works are widely used in schools and universities worldwide, although attempts have been made to

Maya Angelou

Angelou reciting her poem "On the Pulse of Morning" at US President Bill Clinton's inauguration, January 20, 1993

Born	Marguerite Annie Johnson April 4, 1928 St. Louis, Missouri, U.S.
Died	May 28, 2014 (aged 86) Winston-Salem, North Carolina, U.S.
Occupation	Writer · poet · civil rights activist
Period	1951–2014
Subject	Memoir · poetry
Notable works	I Know Why the Caged Bird Sings "On the Pulse of Morning"
Spouses	Tosh Angelos (m. 1951; div. 1954) Paul du Feu (m. 1974; div. 1983)
Children	1

Website

www.mayaangelou.com (<http://www.mayaangelou.com>)

ban her books from some U.S. libraries. Angelou's most celebrated works have been labeled as autobiographical fiction, but many critics consider them to be autobiographies. She made a deliberate attempt to challenge the common structure of the autobiography by critiquing, changing and expanding the genre. Her books center on themes such as racism, identity, family and travel.

Contents

Early life

Career

Adulthood and early career: 1951–61

Africa to Caged Bird: 1961–69

Later career

Personal life

Death

Works

Chronology of autobiographies

Reception and legacy

Influence

Critical reception

Awards and honors

Uses in education

Poetry

Style and genre in autobiographies

References

Explanatory notes

Citations

Works cited

External links

Early life

Marguerite Annie Johnson^[4] was born in St. Louis, Missouri, on April 4, 1928, the second child of Bailey Johnson, a doorman and navy dietitian, and Vivian (Baxter) Johnson, a nurse and card dealer.^{[5][note 1]} Angelou's older brother, Bailey Jr., nicknamed Marguerite "Maya", derived from "My" or "Mya Sister".^[6] When Angelou was three and her brother four, their parents' "calamitous marriage"^[7] ended, and their father sent them to Stamps, Arkansas, alone by train, to live with their paternal grandmother, Annie Henderson. In "an astonishing exception"^[8] to the harsh economics of African Americans of the time, Angelou's grandmother prospered financially during the Great Depression and World War II because the general store she owned sold needed basic commodities and because "she made wise and honest investments".^{[5][note 2]}

And Angelou's life has certainly been a full one: from the hardscrabble Depression era South to pimp, prostitute, supper club chanteuse, performer in Porgy and Bess, coordinator for Martin Luther King Jr.'s Southern Christian Leadership Conference, journalist in Egypt and Ghana in the heady days of decolonization, comrade of Malcolm X, and eyewitness to the Watts riots. She knew King and Malcolm, Billie Holiday, and Abbey Lincoln.

Linguist John McWhorter, The New Republic^[10] (McWhorter, p. 36)

To know her life story is to simultaneously wonder what on earth you have been doing with your own life and feel glad that you didn't have to go through half the things she has.

The Guardian writer Gary Younge, 2009^[11]

Four years later, the children's father "came to Stamps without warning"^[12] and returned them to their mother's care in St. Louis. At the age of eight, while living with her mother, Angelou was sexually abused and raped by her mother's boyfriend, a man named Freeman. She told her brother, who told the rest of their family. Freeman was found guilty but was jailed for only one day. Four days after his release, he was murdered, probably by Angelou's uncles.^[13] Angelou became mute for almost five years,^[14] believing, as she stated, "I thought, my voice killed him; I killed that man, because I told his name. And then I thought I would never speak again, because my voice would kill anyone."^[15] According to Marcia Ann Gillespie and her colleagues, who wrote a biography about Angelou, it was during this period of silence when Angelou developed her extraordinary memory, her love for books and literature, and her ability to listen and observe the world around her.^[16]

Shortly after Freeman's murder, Angelou and her brother were sent back to their grandmother.^[17] Angelou credits a teacher and friend of her family, Mrs. Bertha Flowers, with helping her speak again. Flowers introduced her to authors such as Charles Dickens, William Shakespeare, Edgar Allan Poe, Douglas Johnson, and James Weldon Johnson, authors who would affect her life and career, as well as black female artists like Frances Harper, Anne Spencer, and Jessie Fauset.^{[18][19][20]}

When Angelou was 14, she and her brother moved in with their mother once again, who had since moved to Oakland, California. During World War II, Angelou attended the California Labor School. At the age of 16, she became the first black female cable car conductor in San Francisco.^{[21][22][23]} She wanted the job badly, admiring the uniforms of the operators^{[22][23]}—so much so that her mother referred to it as her "dream job."^[23] Her mother encouraged her to pursue the position, but warned her that she would need to arrive early and work harder than others.^[23] In 2014, Angelou received a lifetime achievement award from the Conference of Minority Transportation Officials as part of a session billed "Women Who Move the Nation."^{[22][23]}

Three weeks after completing school, at the age of 17, she gave birth to her son, Clyde (who later changed his name to Guy Johnson).^{[24][25]}

Career

Adulthood and early career: 1951–61

In 1951, Angelou married Tosh Angelos, a Greek electrician, former sailor, and aspiring musician, despite the condemnation of interracial relationships at the time and the disapproval of her mother.^{[26][27][note 3]} She took modern dance classes during this time, and met dancers and choreographers Alvin Ailey and Ruth Beckford. Ailey and Angelou formed a dance team, calling themselves "Al and Rita", and performed modern dance at fraternal black organizations throughout San Francisco but never became successful.^[29] Angelou, her new husband, and her son moved to New York City so she could study African dance with Trinidadian dancer Pearl Primus, but they returned to San Francisco a year later.^[30]

After Angelou's marriage ended in 1954, she danced professionally in clubs around San Francisco, including the nightclub the Purple Onion, where she sang and danced to calypso music.^[31] Up to that point she went by the name of "Marguerite Johnson", or "Rita", but at the strong suggestion of her managers and supporters at the Purple Onion, she changed her professional name to "Maya Angelou" (her nickname and former married surname). It was a "distinctive name"^[32] that set her apart and captured the feel of her calypso dance performances. During 1954 and 1955, Angelou toured Europe with a production of the opera Porgy and Bess. She began her practice of learning the language of every country she visited, and in a few years she gained proficiency in several languages.^[33] In 1957, riding on the popularity of calypso, Angelou recorded her first album, Miss Calypso, which was reissued as a CD in 1996.^{[29][34][35]} She appeared in an off-Broadway review that inspired the 1957 film Calypso Heat Wave, in which Angelou sang and performed her own compositions.^{[34][note 4][note 5]}

Angelou met novelist John Oliver Killens in 1959 and, at his urging, moved to New York to concentrate on her writing career. She joined the Harlem Writers Guild, where she met several major African-American authors, including John Henrik Clarke, Rosa Guy, Paule Marshall, and Julian Mayfield, and was published for the first time.^[37] In 1960, after meeting civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. and hearing him speak, she and Killens organized "the legendary"^[38] Cabaret for Freedom to benefit the Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC), and she was named SCLC's Northern Coordinator. According to scholar Lyman B. Hagen, her contributions to civil rights as a fundraiser and SCLC organizer were successful and "eminently effective".^[39] Angelou also began her pro-Castro and anti-apartheid activism during this time.^[40]

Africa to Caged Bird: 1961–69

In 1961, Angelou performed in Jean Genet's play The Blacks, along with Abbey Lincoln, Roscoe Lee Brown, James Earl Jones, Louis Gossett, Godfrey Cambridge, and Cicely Tyson.^[41] Also in 1961, she met South African freedom fighter Vusumzi Make; they never officially married.^[42] She and her son Guy moved with Make to Cairo, where Angelou worked as an associate editor at the weekly English-language newspaper The Arab Observer.^{[43][44]} In 1962, her relationship with Make ended, and she and Guy moved to Accra, Ghana so he could attend college, but he was seriously injured in an automobile accident.^[note 6] Angelou remained in Accra for his recovery and ended up staying there until 1965. She became an administrator at the University of Ghana, and was active in the African-American expatriate community.^[46] She was a feature editor for The African Review,^[47] a freelance writer for the Ghanaian Times, wrote and broadcast for Radio Ghana, and worked and performed for Ghana's National Theatre. She performed in a revival of The Blacks in Geneva and Berlin.^[48]

Most of Angelou's time in Africa was spent in Accra, Ghana, shown here in 2008.

In Accra, she became close friends with Malcolm X during his visit in the early 1960s.^[note 7] Angelou returned to the U.S. in 1965 to help him build a new civil rights organization, the Organization of Afro-American Unity; he was assassinated shortly afterward. Devastated and adrift, she joined her brother in Hawaii, where she resumed her singing career. She moved back to Los Angeles to focus on her writing career. Working as a market researcher in Watts, Angelou witnessed the riots in the summer of 1965. She acted in and wrote plays, and returned to New York in 1967. She met her lifelong friend Rosa Guy and renewed her friendship with James Baldwin, whom she had met in Paris in the 1950s and called "my brother", during this time.^[50] Her friend Jerry Purcell provided Angelou with a stipend to support her writing.^[51]

In 1968, Martin Luther King Jr. asked Angelou to organize a march. She agreed, but "postpones again",^[38] and in what Gillespie calls "a macabre twist of fate",^[52] he was assassinated on her 40th birthday (April 4).^[note 8] Devastated again, she was encouraged out of her depression by her friend James Baldwin. As Gillespie states, "If 1968 was a year of great pain, loss, and sadness, it was also the year when America first witnessed the breadth and depth of Maya Angelou's spirit and creative genius".^[52] Despite having almost no experience, she wrote, produced, and narrated Blacks, Blues, Black!,^[54] a ten-part series of documentaries about the connection between blues music and black Americans' African heritage, and what Angelou called the "Africanisms still current in the U.S."^[55] for National Educational Television, the precursor of PBS. Also in 1968, inspired at a dinner party she attended with Baldwin, cartoonist Jules Feiffer, and his wife Judy, and challenged by Random House editor Robert Loomis, she wrote her first autobiography, I Know Why the Caged Bird Sings, published in 1969. This brought her international recognition and acclaim.^[56]

Later career

Released in 1972, Angelou's Georgia, Georgia, produced by a Swedish film company and filmed in Sweden, was the first screenplay written by a black woman.^[57] She also wrote the film's soundtrack, despite having very little additional input in the filming of the movie.^[58]^[note 9] Angelou married Paul du Feu, a Welsh carpenter and ex-husband of writer Germaine Greer, in San Francisco in 1973.^[note 10] Over the next ten years, as Gillespie has stated, "She [Angelou] had accomplished more than many artists hope to achieve in a lifetime."^[60] Angelou worked as a composer, writing for singer Roberta Flack,^[note 11] and composing movie scores. She wrote articles, short stories, TV scripts, documentaries, autobiographies, and poetry. She produced plays and was named visiting professor at several colleges and universities. She was "a reluctant actor",^[62] and was nominated for a Tony Award in 1973 for her role in Look Away.^[63] As a theater director, in 1988 she undertook a revival of Errol John's play Moon on a Rainbow Shawl at the Almeida Theatre in London.^[64]

In 1977, Angelou appeared in a supporting role in the television mini-series Roots. She was given a multitude of awards during this period, including over thirty honorary degrees from colleges and universities from all over the world.^[63] In the late 1970s, Angelou met Oprah Winfrey when Winfrey was a TV anchor in Baltimore, Maryland; Angelou would later become Winfrey's close friend and mentor.^{[65][note 12]} In 1981, Angelou and du Feu divorced.

She returned to the southern United States in 1981 because she felt she had to come to terms with her past there and, despite having no bachelor's degree, accepted the lifetime Reynolds Professorship of American Studies at Wake Forest University in Winston-Salem, North Carolina, where she was one of a few full-time African-American professors.^{[67][68]} From that point on, she considered herself "a teacher who writes".^[69] Angelou taught a variety of subjects that reflected her interests, including philosophy, ethics, theology, science, theater, and writing.^[70] The Winston-Salem Journal reported that even though she made many friends on campus, "she never quite lived down all of the criticism from people who thought she was more of a celebrity than an intellect...[and] an overpaid figurehead".^[68] The last course she taught at Wake Forest was in 2011, but she was planning to teach another course in late 2014. Her final speaking engagement at the university was in late 2013.^[71] Beginning in the 1990s, Angelou actively participated in the lecture circuit^[72] in a customized tour bus, something she continued into her eighties.^{[73][74]}

Maya Angelou speaking at a rally for Barack Obama, 2008

In 1993, Angelou recited her poem "On the Pulse of Morning" at the presidential inauguration of Bill Clinton, becoming the first poet to make an inaugural recitation since Robert Frost at John F. Kennedy's inauguration in 1961.^[72] Her recitation resulted in more fame and recognition for her previous works, and broadened her appeal "across racial, economic, and educational boundaries".^[75] The recording of the poem won a Grammy Award.^[76] In June 1995, she delivered what Richard Long called her "second 'public' poem",^[77] titled "A Brave and Startling Truth", which commemorated the 50th anniversary of the United Nations.

Angelou achieved her goal of directing a feature film in 1996, Down in the Delta, which featured actors such as Alfre Woodard and Wesley Snipes.^[78] Also in 1996, she collaborated with R&B artists Ashford & Simpson on seven of the eleven tracks of their album Been Found. The album was responsible for three of Angelou's only Billboard chart appearances.^[79] In 2000, she created a successful collection of products for Hallmark, including greeting cards and decorative household items.^{[80][81]} She responded to critics who charged her with being too commercial by stating that "the enterprise was perfectly in keeping with her role as 'the people's poet'".^[82] More than thirty years after Angelou began writing her life story, she completed her sixth autobiography A Song Flung Up to Heaven, in 2002.^[83]

Angelou campaigned for the Democratic Party in the 2008 presidential primaries, giving her public support to Hillary Clinton.^[53] In the run-up to the January Democratic primary in South Carolina, the Clinton campaign ran ads featuring Angelou's endorsement.^[84] The ads were part of the campaign's efforts to rally support in the Black community,^[85] but Barack Obama won the South Carolina primary, finishing 29 points ahead of Clinton and taking 80% of the Black vote.^[86] When Clinton's campaign ended, Angelou put her support behind Obama,^[53] who went on to win the presidential election and became the first African-American president of the United States. After Obama's inauguration, she stated, "We are growing up beyond the idiocies of racism and sexism."^[87]

In late 2010, Angelou donated her personal papers and career memorabilia to the Schomburg Center for Research in Black Culture in Harlem.^[88] They consisted of more than 340 boxes of documents that featured her handwritten notes on yellow legal pads for I Know Why the Caged Bird Sings, a 1982 telegram from Coretta Scott King, fan mail, and personal and professional correspondence from colleagues such as her editor Robert Loomis.^[89] In 2011, Angelou served as a consultant for the Martin Luther King, Jr. Memorial in Washington, D.C. She spoke out in opposition to a paraphrase of a quotation by King that appeared on the memorial, saying, "The quote makes Dr. Martin Luther King look like an arrogant twit",^[90] and demanded that it be changed. Eventually, the paraphrase was removed.^[91]

Angelou and Hillary Clinton at an event in North Carolina in 2008

In 2013, at the age of 85, Angelou published the seventh volume of autobiography in her series, titled Mom & Me & Mom, which focuses on her relationship with her mother.^[92]

Personal life

Evidence suggests that Angelou was partially descended from the Mende people of West Africa.^{[96][note 13]} In 2008, a DNA test revealed that among all of her African ancestors, 45 percent were from the Congo-Angola region and 55 percent were from West Africa.^[98] A 2008 PBS documentary found that Angelou's maternal great-grandmother Mary Lee, who had been emancipated after the Civil War, became pregnant by her white former owner, John Savin. Savin forced Lee to sign a false statement accusing another man of being the father of her child. After Savin was indicted for forcing Lee to commit perjury, and despite the discovery that Savin was the father, a jury found him not guilty. Lee was sent to the Clinton County poorhouse in Missouri with her daughter, Marguerite Baxter, who became Angelou's grandmother. Angelou described Lee as "that poor little Black girl, physically and mentally bruised".^[99]

I make writing as much a part of my life as I do eating or listening to music.

Maya Angelou, 1999^[93]

I also wear a hat or a very tightly pulled head tie when I write. I suppose I hope by doing that I will keep my brains from seeping out of my scalp and running in great gray blobs down my neck, into my ears, and over my face.

Maya Angelou, 1984^[94]

Nothing so frightens me as writing, but nothing so satisfies me. It's like a swimmer in the [English] Channel: you face the stingrays and waves and cold and grease, and finally you reach the other shore, and you put your foot on the ground —Aaaahhhh!

Maya Angelou, 1989^[95]

The details of Angelou's life described in her seven autobiographies and in numerous interviews, speeches, and articles tended to be inconsistent. Critic Mary Jane Lupton has explained that when Angelou spoke about her life, she did so eloquently but informally and "with no time chart in front of her".^[100] For example, she was married at least twice, but never clarified the number of times she had been married, "for fear of sounding frivolous";^[73] according to her autobiographies and to Gillespie, she married Tosh Angelos in 1951 and Paul du Feu in 1974, and began her relationship with Vusumzi Make in 1961, but never formally married him. Angelou held many jobs, including some in the sex trade, working as a prostitute and madame for lesbians, as she described in her second autobiography, Gather Together in My Name. In a 1995 interview, Angelou said, "I wrote about my experiences because I thought too many people tell young folks, 'I never did anything wrong. Who, Moi? – never I. I have no skeletons in my closet. In fact, I have no closet.' They lie like that and then young people find themselves in situations and they think, 'Damn I must be a pretty bad guy. My mom or dad never did anything wrong.' They can't forgive themselves and go on with their lives."^[101]

Angelou had one son, Guy, whose birth she described in her first autobiography; one grandson, two great-grandchildren,^[102] and, according to Gillespie, a large group of friends and extended family.^[note 14] Angelou's mother Vivian Baxter died in 1991 and her brother Bailey Johnson Jr., died in 2000 after a series of strokes; both were important figures in her life and her books.^{[103][note 15]} In 1981, the mother of her grandson disappeared with him; finding him took four years.^{[104][note 16]}

In 2009, the gossip website TMZ erroneously reported that Angelou had been hospitalized in Los Angeles when she was alive and well in St. Louis, which resulted in rumors of her death and, according to Angelou, concern among her friends and family worldwide.^[11] In 2013, Angelou told her friend Oprah Winfrey that she had studied courses offered by the Unity Church, which were spiritually significant to her.^[106] She did not earn a university degree, but according to Gillespie it was Angelou's preference to be called "Dr. Angelou" by people outside of her family and close friends. She owned two homes in Winston-Salem, North Carolina, and a "lordly brownstone"^[11] in Harlem, which was purchased in 2004^[107] and was full of her "growing library"^[108] of books she collected throughout her life, artwork collected over the span of many decades, and well-stocked kitchens. Guardian writer Gary Younge reported that in Angelou's Harlem home were several African wall hangings and her collection of paintings, including ones of several jazz trumpeters, a watercolor of Rosa Parks, and a Faith Ringgold work titled "Maya's Quilt Of Life".^[11]

According to Gillespie, she hosted several celebrations per year at her main residence in Winston-Salem; "her skill in the kitchen is the stuff of legend—from haute cuisine to down-home comfort food".^[74] The Winston-Salem Journal stated: "Securing an invitation to one of Angelou's Thanksgiving dinners, Christmas tree decorating parties or birthday parties was among the most coveted invitations in town."^[68] The New York Times, describing Angelou's residence history in New York City, stated that she regularly hosted elaborate New Year's Day parties.^[107] She combined her cooking and writing skills in her 2004 book Hallelujah! The Welcome Table, which featured 73 recipes, many of which she learned from her grandmother and mother, accompanied by 28 vignettes.^[109] She followed up in 2010 with her second cookbook, Great Food, All Day Long: Cook Splendidly, Eat Smart, which focused on weight loss and portion control.^[110]

Beginning with I Know Why the Caged Bird Sings, Angelou used the same "writing ritual"^[20] for many years. She would wake early in the morning and check into a hotel room, where the staff was instructed to remove any pictures from the walls. She would write on legal pads while lying on the bed, with only a bottle of sherry, a deck of cards to play solitaire, Roget's Thesaurus, and the Bible, and would leave by the early afternoon. She would average 10–12 pages of written material a day, which she edited down to three or four pages in the evening.^{[111][note 17]} She went through this process to "enchant" herself, and as she said in a 1989 interview with the British Broadcasting Corporation, "relive the agony, the anguish, the Sturm und Drang".^[113] She placed herself back in the time she wrote about, even traumatic experiences such as her rape in Caged Bird, in order to "tell the human truth"^[113] about her life. Angelou stated that she played cards in order to get to that place of enchantment and in order to access her memories more effectively. She said, "It may take an hour to get into it, but once I'm in it—ha! It's so delicious!"^[113] She did not find the process cathartic; rather, she found relief in "telling the truth".^[113]

Death

Angelou died on the morning of May 28, 2014.^[114] She was found by her nurse. Although Angelou had reportedly been in poor health and had canceled recent scheduled appearances, she was working on another book, an autobiography about her experiences with national and world leaders.^{[68][82]} During her memorial service at Wake Forest University, her son Guy Johnson stated that despite being in constant pain due to her dancing career and respiratory failure, she wrote four books during the last ten years of her life. He said, "She left this mortal plane with no loss of acuity and no loss in comprehension."^[115]

Tributes to Angelou and condolences were paid by artists, entertainers, and world leaders, including Obama, whose sister was named after Angelou, and Bill Clinton.^{[82][116]} Harold Augenbraum, from the National Book Foundation, said that Angelou's "legacy is one that all writers and readers across the world can admire and aspire to."^[117] The week after Angelou's death, I Know Why the Caged Bird Sings rose to number 1 on Amazon.com's bestseller list.^[82]

On May 29, 2014, Mount Zion Baptist Church in Winston-Salem, of which Angelou was a member for 30 years, held a public memorial service to honor her.^[118] On June 7, a private memorial service was held at Wait Chapel on the campus of Wake Forest University in Winston-Salem. The memorial was shown live on local stations in the Winston-Salem/Triad area and streamed live on the university web site with speeches from her son, Oprah Winfrey, Michelle Obama, and Bill Clinton.^{[119][120][121][122]} On June 15, a memorial was held at Glide Memorial Church in San Francisco, where Angelou was a member for many years. Rev. Cecil Williams, Mayor Ed Lee, and former mayor Willie Brown spoke.^[123]

Works

Angelou wrote a total of seven autobiographies. According to scholar Mary Jane Lupton, Angelou's third autobiography Singin' and Swingin' and Gettin' Merry Like Christmas marked the first time a well-known African-American autobiographer had written a third volume about her life.^[124] Her books "stretch over time and place", from Arkansas to Africa and back to the U.S., and take place from the beginnings of World War II to the assassination of Martin Luther King, Jr.^[125] She published her seventh autobiography Mom & Me & Mom in 2013, at the age of 85.^[126] Critics have tended to judge Angelou's subsequent autobiographies "in light of the first",^[127] with Caged Bird receiving the highest praise. Angelou wrote five collections of essays, which writer Hilton Als called her "wisdom books" and "homilies strung together with autobiographical texts".^[38] Angelou used the same editor throughout her writing career, Robert Loomis, an executive editor at Random House; he retired in 2011^[128] and has been called "one of publishing's hall of fame editors."^[129] Angelou said regarding Loomis: "We have a relationship that's kind of famous among publishers."^[130]

Angelou's long and extensive career also included poetry, plays, screenplays for television and film, directing, acting, and public speaking.

All my work, my life, everything I do is about survival, not just bare, awful, plodding survival, but

She was a prolific writer of poetry; her volume Just Give Me a Cool Drink of Water 'fore I Diiie (1971) was nominated for the Pulitzer Prize, and she was chosen by US President Bill Clinton to recite her poem "On the Pulse of Morning" during his inauguration in 1993.^[72]^[132] survival with grace and faith. While one may encounter many defeats, one must not be defeated.

Maya Angelou^[131]

Angelou's successful acting career included roles in numerous plays, films, and television programs, including her appearance in the television mini-series Roots in 1977. Her screenplay, Georgia, Georgia (1972), was the first original script by a black woman to be produced, and she was the first African-American woman to direct a major motion picture, Down in the Delta, in 1998.^[78]

Chronology of autobiographies

- I Know Why the Caged Bird Sings (1969): Up to 1944 (age 17)
- Gather Together in My Name (1974): 1944–48
- Singin' and Swingin' and Gettin' Merry Like Christmas (1976): 1949–55
- The Heart of a Woman (1981): 1957–62
- All God's Children Need Traveling Shoes (1986): 1962–65
- A Song Flung Up to Heaven (2002): 1965–68
- Mom & Me & Mom (2013): overview

Reception and legacy

Influence

When I Know Why the Caged Bird Sings was published in 1969, Angelou was hailed as a new kind of memoirist, one of the first African-American women who were able to publicly discuss their personal lives. According to scholar Hilton Als, up to that point, black female writers were marginalized to the point that they were unable to present themselves as central characters in the literature they wrote.^[38] Linguist John McWhorter agreed, seeing Angelou's works, which he called "tracts", as "apologetic writing". He placed Angelou in the tradition of African-American literature as a defense of black culture, which he called "a literary manifestation of the imperative that reigned in the black scholarship of the period".^[133] Writer Julian Mayfield, who called Caged Bird "a work of art that eludes description",^[38] argued that Angelou's autobiographies set a precedent for not only other black women writers, but also African-American autobiography as a whole. Als said that Caged Bird marked one of the first times that a black autobiographer could, as he put it, "write about blackness from the inside, without apology or defense".^[38] Through the writing of her autobiography, Angelou became recognized and highly respected as a spokesperson for blacks and women.^[134] It made her "without a doubt, ...

US President Barack Obama presenting Angelou with the Presidential Medal of Freedom, 2011

America's most visible black woman autobiographer",^[134] and "a major autobiographical voice of the time".^[135] As writer Gary Younge said, "Probably more than almost any other writer alive, Angelou's life literally is her work."^[73]

Als said that Caged Bird helped increase black feminist writings in the 1970s, less through its originality than "its resonance in the prevailing Zeitgeist",^[38] or the time in which it was written, at the end of the American Civil Rights Movement. Als also claimed that Angelou's writings, more interested in self-revelation than in politics or feminism, have freed other female writers to "open themselves up without shame to the eyes of the world".^[38] Angelou critic Joanne M. Braxton stated that Caged Bird was "perhaps the most aesthetically pleasing" autobiography written by an African-American woman in its era.^[134] Angelou's poetry has influenced the modern hip-hop music community, including artists such as Kanye West, Common, Tupac Shakur, and Nicki Minaj.^[136]

Critical reception

Reviewer Elsie B. Washington, most likely due to President Clinton's choice of Angelou to recite her poem "On the Pulse of Morning" at his 1993 inauguration, called her "the black woman's poet laureate".^[137] Sales of the paperback version of her books and poetry rose by 300–600% the week after Angelou's recitation. Random House, which published the poem later that year, had to reprint 400,000 copies of all her books to keep up with the demand. They sold more of her books in January 1993 than they did in all of 1992, accounting for a 1200% increase.^[138] Angelou famously said, in response to criticism regarding using the details of her life in her work, "I agree with Balzac and 19th-century writers, black and white, who say, 'I write for money'."^[73] Younge, speaking after the publication of Angelou's third book of essays, Letter to My Daughter (2008), has said, "For the last couple of decades she has merged her various talents into a kind of performance art—issuing a message of personal and social uplift by blending poetry, song and conversation."^[11]

Angelou's books, especially I Know Why the Caged Bird Sings, have been criticized by many parents, causing their removal from school curricula and library shelves. According to the National Coalition Against Censorship, parents and schools have objected to Caged Bird's depictions of lesbianism, premarital cohabitation, pornography, and violence.^[139] Some have been critical of the book's sexually explicit scenes, use of language, and irreverent depictions of religion.^[140] Caged Bird appeared third on the American Library Association (ALA) list of the 100 Most Frequently Challenged Books of 1990–2000 and sixth on the ALA's 2000–2009 list.^{[141][142]}

Awards and honors

Angelou was honored by universities, literary organizations, government agencies, and special interest groups. Her honors included a Pulitzer Prize nomination for her book of poetry, Just Give Me a Cool Drink of Water 'fore I Diiie,^[132] a Tony Award nomination for her role in the 1973 play Look Away, and three Grammys for her spoken word albums.^{[143][144]} She served on two presidential committees,^{[127][145]} and was awarded the Spingarn Medal in 1994,^[146] the National Medal of Arts in 2000,^[147] and the Presidential Medal of Freedom in 2011.^[148] Angelou was awarded over fifty honorary degrees.^[3]

Uses in education

Angelou's autobiographies have been used in narrative and multicultural approaches in teacher education. Jocelyn A. Glazier, a professor at George Washington University, has trained teachers how to "talk about race" in their classrooms with I Know Why the Caged Bird Sings and Gather Together in My Name. According to Glazier, Angelou's use of understatement, self-mockery, humor, and irony have left readers of Angelou's autobiographies unsure of what she left out and how they should respond to the events she described. Angelou's depictions of her experiences of racism have forced white readers to either explore their feelings about race and their own "privileged status", or to avoid the discussion as a means of keeping their privilege. Glazier found that critics have focused on the way Angelou fits within the genre of African-American autobiography and on her literary techniques, but readers have tended to react to her storytelling with "surprise, particularly when [they] enter the text with certain expectations about the genre of autobiography".^[149]

Educator Daniel Challener, in his 1997 book Stories of Resilience in Childhood, analyzed the events in Caged Bird to illustrate resiliency in children. He argued that Angelou's book has provided a "useful framework" for exploring the obstacles many children like Maya have faced and how their communities have helped them succeed.^[150] Psychologist Chris Boyatzis has reported using Caged Bird to supplement scientific theory and research in the instruction of child development topics such as the development of self-concept and self-esteem, ego resilience, industry versus inferiority, effects of abuse, parenting styles, sibling and friendship relations, gender issues, cognitive development, puberty, and identity formation in adolescence. He found Caged Bird a "highly effective" tool for providing real-life examples of these psychological concepts.^[151]

Poetry

Angelou is best known for her seven autobiographies, but she was also a prolific and successful poet. She was called "the black woman's poet laureate", and her poems have been called the anthems of African Americans.^[137] Angelou studied and began writing poetry at a young age, and used poetry and other great literature to cope with her rape as a young girl, as described in Caged Bird.^[18] According to scholar Yasmin Y. DeGout, literature also affected Angelou's sensibilities as the poet and writer she became, especially the "liberating discourse that would evolve in her own poetic canon".^[152]

Many critics consider Angelou's autobiographies more important than her poetry.^[153] Although all her books have been best-sellers, her poetry has not been perceived to be as serious as her prose and has been understudied.^[5] Her poems were more interesting when she recited and performed them, and many critics emphasized the public aspect of her poetry.^[154] Angelou's lack of critical acclaim has been attributed to both the public nature of many of her poems and to Angelou's popular success, and to critics' preferences for poetry as a written form rather than a verbal, performed one.^[155] Zofia Burr has countered Angelou's critics by condemning them for not taking into account Angelou's larger purposes in her writing: "to be representative rather than individual, authoritative rather than confessional".^[156]

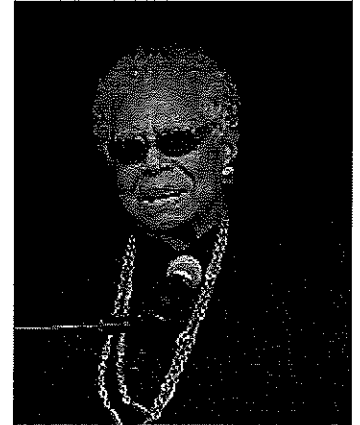

Style and genre in autobiographies

Angelou's use of fiction-writing techniques such as dialogue, characterization, and development of theme, setting, plot, and language has often resulted in the placement of her books into the genre of autobiographical fiction.^[157] Angelou made a deliberate attempt in her books to challenge the common structure of the autobiography by critiquing, changing, and expanding the genre.^[158]

Scholar Mary Jane Lupton argues that all of Angelou's autobiographies conform to the genre's standard structure: they are written by a single author, they are chronological, and they contain elements of character, technique, and theme.^[159] Angelou recognizes that there are fictional aspects to her books; Lupton agrees, stating that Angelou tended to "diverge from the conventional notion of autobiography as truth",^[160] which parallels the conventions of much of African-American autobiography written during the abolitionist period of U.S. history, when as both Lupton and African-American scholar Crispin Sartwell put it, the truth was censored out of the need for self-protection.^{[160][161]} Scholar Lyman B. Hagen places Angelou in the long tradition of African-American autobiography, but claims that Angelou created a unique interpretation of the autobiographical form.^[162]

According to African-American literature scholar Pierre A. Walker, the challenge for much of the history of African-American literature was that its authors have had to confirm its status as literature before they could accomplish their political goals, which was why Angelou's editor Robert Loomis was able to dare her into writing Caged Bird by challenging her to write an autobiography that could be considered "high art".^[163] Angelou acknowledged that she followed the slave narrative tradition of "speaking in the first-person singular talking about the first-person plural, always saying I meaning 'we'".^[127] Scholar John McWhorter calls Angelou's books "tracts"^[133] that defend African-American culture and fight negative stereotypes. According to McWhorter, Angelou structured her books, which to him seem to be written more for children than for adults, to support her defense of black culture. McWhorter sees Angelou as she depicts herself in her autobiographies "as a kind of stand-in figure for the black American in Troubled Times".^[133] McWhorter views Angelou's works as dated, but recognizes that "she has helped to pave the way for contemporary black writers who are able to enjoy the luxury of being merely individuals, no longer representatives of the race, only themselves".^[164] Scholar Lynn Z. Bloom compares Angelou's works to the writings of Frederick Douglass, stating that both fulfilled the same purpose: to describe black culture and to interpret it for their wider, white audiences.^[165]

According to scholar Sondra O'Neale, Angelou's poetry can be placed within the African-American oral tradition, and her prose "follows classic technique in nonpoetic Western forms".^[166] O'Neale states that Angelou avoided using a "monolithic black language",^[167] and accomplished, through direct dialogue, what O'Neale calls a "more expected ghetto expressiveness".^[167] McWhorter finds both the language Angelou used in her autobiographies and the people she depicted unrealistic, resulting in a separation between her and her audience. As McWhorter states, "I have never read autobiographical writing where I had such a hard time summoning a sense of how the subject talks, or a sense of who the subject really is".^[168] McWhorter asserts, for example, that key figures in Angelou's books, like herself, her son Guy, and mother Vivian do not speak as one would expect, and that their speech is "cleaned up" for her readers.^[169] Guy, for example, represents the young black male, while Vivian represents the idealized mother figure, and the stiff language they use, as well as the language in Angelou's text, is intended to prove that blacks can use standard English competently.^[170]

Angelou at York College in February 2013

McWhorter recognizes that much of the reason for Angelou's style was the "apologetic" nature of her writing.^[133] When Angelou wrote Caged Bird at the end of the 1960s, one of the necessary and accepted features of literature at the time was "organic unity", and one of her goals was to create a book that satisfied that criterion.^[163] The events in her books were episodic and crafted like a series of short stories, but their arrangements did not follow a strict chronology. Instead, they were placed to emphasize the themes of her books, which include racism, identity, family, and travel. English literature scholar Valerie Sayers has asserted that "Angelou's poetry and prose are similar". They both rely on her "direct voice", which alternates steady rhythms with syncopated patterns and uses similes and metaphors (e.g., the caged bird).^[171] According to Hagen, Angelou's works were influenced by both conventional literary and the oral traditions of the African-American community. For example, she referenced over 100 literary characters throughout her books and poetry.^[172] In addition, she used the elements of blues music, including the act of testimony when speaking of one's life and struggles, ironic understatement, and the use of natural metaphors, rhythms, and intonations.^[173] Angelou, instead of depending upon plot, used personal and historical events to shape her books.^[174]

References

Explanatory notes

1. Angelou wrote about Vivian Baxter's life and their relationship in Mom & Me & Mom (2013), her final installment in her series of seven autobiographies.
2. According to Angelou, Annie Henderson built her business with food stalls catering to black workers, which eventually developed into a store.^[9]
3. The correct Greek spelling of Angelou's husband name is probably "Anastasios Angelopoulos".^[28]
4. Reviewer John M. Miller calls Angelou's performance of her song "All That Happens in the Marketplace" the "most genuine musical moment in the film".^[34]
5. In Angelou's third book of essays, Letter to My Daughter (2009), she credits Cuban artist Celia Cruz as one of the greatest influences of her singing career, and later, credits Cruz for the effectiveness and impact of Angelou's poetry performances and readings.^[36]
6. Guy Johnson, who as a result of this accident in Accra and one in the late 1960s, underwent a series of spinal surgeries. He, like his mother, became a writer and poet.^[45]
7. Angelou called her friendship with Malcolm X "a brother/sister relationship".^[49]
8. Angelou did not celebrate her birthday for many years, choosing instead to send flowers to King's widow Coretta Scott King.^[53]
9. See Mom & Me & Mom, pp. 168–178, for a description of Angelou's experience in Stockholm.
10. Angelou described their marriage, which she called "made in heaven",^[59] in her second book of essays Even the Stars Look Lonesome (1997).
11. Angelou co-wrote "And So It Goes" on Flack's 1988 album Oasis.^[61]
12. Angelou dedicated her 1993 book of essays Wouldn't Take Nothing for My Journey Now to Winfrey.^[66]
13. In her fifth autobiography All God's Children Need Traveling Shoes (1987), Angelou recounts being identified, on the basis of her appearance, as part of the Bambara people, a subset of the Mande.^[97]
14. See Gillespie et al., pp. 153–175.
15. Angelou describes her brother's addiction to heroin in Mom & Me & Mom, pp. 189–194.

16. In Angelou's essay, "My Grandson, Home at Last", published in Woman's Day in 1986, she describes the kidnapping and her response to it.^[105]
17. In Letter to My Daughter (2009), Angelou's third book of essays, she related the first time she used legal pads to write.^[112]

Citations

1. "Maya Angelou" (https://web.archive.org/web/20131217043543/http://www.swisseduc.ch/english/readinglist/angelou_maya/pronun.html). SwissEduc.com. December 17, 2013. Archived from the original (http://www.swisseduc.ch/english/readinglist/angelou_maya/pronun.html) on December 17, 2013.
2. Glover, Terry (December 2009). "Dr. Maya Angelou". Ebony. Vol. 65 no. 2. p. 67.
3. Stanley, Alessandra (May 17, 1992). "Whose Honor Is It, Anyway" (<https://www.nytimes.com/1992/05/17/style/whose-honor-is-it-anyway.html>). The New York Times. Retrieved November 23, 2014.
4. Ferrer, Anne (May 29, 2014). "Angelou's optimism overcame hardships" (<https://web.archive.org/web/20140531112037/http://www.thestarphoenix.com/news/Angelou%2Boptimism%2Bovercame%2Bhardships/9887987/story.html>). The Star Phoenix. Archived from the original (<https://thestarphoenix.com/news/Angelou+optimism+overcame+hardships/9887987/story.html>) on May 31, 2014. Retrieved May 30, 2014.
5. Lupton, p. 4.
6. Angelou (1969), p. 67.
7. Angelou (1969), p. 6.
8. Johnson, Claudia (2008). "Introduction". In Johnson, Claudia (ed.). Racism in Maya Angelou's I Know Why the Caged Bird Sings. Detroit, Michigan: Gale Press. p. 11. ISBN 978-0-7377-3905-3.
9. Angelou (1993), pp. 21–24.
10. McWhorter, John (May 28, 2014). "Saint Maya Angelou: The Product of a Blissfully Bygone America" (<https://newrepublic.com/article/117924/saint-maya-angelou-product-blissfully-bygone-america>). The New Republic. Retrieved December 25, 2016.
11. Younge, Gary (November 13, 2013). "Maya Angelou: 'I'm fine as wine in the summertime'" (<https://www.theguardian.com/books/2009/nov/14/maya-angelou-interview>). The Guardian. London. Retrieved December 13, 2013.
12. Angelou (1969), p. 52.
13. Braxton, Joanne M. (1999). Maya Angelou's I Know Why the Caged Bird Sings: A Casebook (<https://archive.org/details/mayaangelousikno00joan>). Oxford University Press. p. 121 (<https://archive.org/details/mayaangelousikno00joan/page/121>). ISBN 978-0-19-511607-6.
14. Lupton, p. 5.
15. "Maya Angelou I Know Why the Caged Bird Sings" (http://www.bbc.co.uk/worldservice/specials/133_wbc_archive_new/page2.shtml). World Book Club. BBC World Service. October 2005. Retrieved December 17, 2013.
16. Gillespie et al., p. 22.
17. Gillespie et al., pp. 21–22.
18. Angelou (1969), p. 13.
19. Gillespie et al., p. 23.
20. Lupton, p. 15.
21. Gillespie et al., p. 28.
22. Brown, DeNeen L. (March 12, 2014). "Why Maya Angelou wanted to become a street car conductor" (<https://www.washingtonpost.com/blogs/she-the-people/wp/2014/03/12/why-maya-angelou-wanted-to-become-a-street-car-conductor/>). She The People [blog]. The Washington Post. Retrieved June 26, 2018.
23. Fernandez, Lisa (May 28, 2014). "Maya Angelou Was 1st Black, Female San Francisco Street Car Conductor" (<https://www.nbcbayarea.com/news/local/Maya-Angelou-Was-1st-Black-San-Francisco-Cable-Car-Conductor-260930551.html>). NBC. Retrieved September 27, 2018.
24. Angelou (1969), p. 279.

25. Long, Richard (November 1, 2005). "35 Who Made a Difference: Maya Angelou" (<http://www.smithsonianmag.com/people-places/10013086.html>). Smithsonian Magazine. Retrieved December 17, 2013.
26. Hagen, p. xvi.
27. Gillespie et al., pp. 29, 31.
28. Powell, Dannye Romine (1994). "Maya Angelou". Parting the Curtains: Interviews with Southern Writers. Winston-Salem, North Carolina: John F. Blair Publisher. p. 10. ISBN 978-0-89587-116-9.
29. Angelou (1993), p. 95.
30. Gillespie et al., pp. 36–37.
31. Gillespie et al., p. 38.
32. Gillespie et al., p. 41.
33. Hagen, pp. 91–92.
34. Miller, John M. "Calypso Heat Wave" (<http://www.tcm.com/this-month/article/290605%7C0/Calypso-Heat-Wave.html>). Turner Classic Movies. Retrieved December 18, 2013.
35. Gillespie et al., p. 48.
36. Angelou (2008), p. 80.
37. Gillespie et al., pp. 49–51.
38. Als, Hilton (August 5, 2002). "Songbird: Maya Angelou takes another look at herself" (http://www.newyorker.com/archive/2002/08/05/020805crbo_books?currentPage=all). The New Yorker. Retrieved December 18, 2013.
39. Hagen, p. 103.
40. Gillespie et al., p. 57.
41. Gillespie et al., p. 64.
42. Gillespie et al., p. 59.
43. Gillespie et al., p. 65.
44. Gillespie et al., p. 71.
45. Gillespie, p. 156.
46. Gillespie et al., pp. 74, 75.
47. Braxton, p. 3.
48. Gillespie et al., pp. 79–80.
49. "Maya Angelou Biography and Interview" (<https://www.achievement.org/achiever/maya-angelou/#biography>). www.achievement.org. American Academy of Achievement.
50. Boyd, Herb (August 5, 2010). "Maya Angelou Remembers James Baldwin". New York Amsterdam News. 100 (32): 17.
51. Gillespie et al., pp. 85–96.
52. Gillespie et al., p. 98.
53. Minzesheimer, Bob (March 26, 2008). "Maya Angelou celebrates her 80 years of pain and joy" (http://usatoday30.usatoday.com/life/book/s/news/2008-03-26-maya-angelou_N.htm). USA Today. Retrieved November 22, 2014.
54. All 10 episodes of Blacks, Blues, Black! can be viewed online (<https://diva.sfsu.edu/collections/sfbatv/10287>) Bay Area Television Archive, diva.sfsu.edu, accessed 23 December 2019
55. Angelou, Maya (February 1982). "Why I Moved Back to the South" (<https://books.google.com/?id=deYZsW0DISIC&pg=PA130&lpg=PA130&dq=Ebony+%22Why+I+Moved+Back+to+the+South%22%22#v=onepage&q=Ebony%20%22Why%20%20Moved%20Back%20o%20the%20South%22%22>). Ebony. No. 37. Retrieved December 19, 2013.
56. Smith, Dinitia (January 23, 2007). "A Career in Letters, 50 Years and Counting" (<https://www.nytimes.com/2007/01/23/books/23loom.html>). The New York Times. Retrieved December 19, 2013.
57. Brown, Avonie (January 4, 1997). "Maya Angelou: The Phenomenal Woman Rises Again". New York Amsterdam News (88): 2.
58. Gillespie et al., p. 105.
59. Angelou, Maya (1997). Even the Stars Look Lonesome. New York: Random House. p. 1. ISBN 978-0-553-37972-3.
60. Gillespie et al., p. 119.
61. Feeney, Nolan (May 28, 2014). "Roberta Flack Remembers Maya Angelou: 'We All Have Been Inspired'" (<http://time.com/132808/roberta-flack-maya-angelou/>). Time Magazine. Retrieved November 15, 2014.
62. Gillespie et al., p. 110.
63. Moore, Lucinda (April 2003). "Growing Up Maya Angelou" (<https://www.smithsonianmag.com/arts-culture/growing-up-maya-angelou-79582387/>). Smithsonian Magazine. Retrieved December 19, 2013.
64. Wolf, Matt (March 20, 2012). "The National Theatre's Global Flair" (<https://www.nytimes.com/2012/03/21/arts/21iht-lon21.html>). The New York Times. Retrieved September 2, 2014.

65. Winfrey, Oprah (December 2000). "Oprah Talks to Maya Angelou" (<http://www.oprah.com/omagazine/Oprah-Interviews-Maya-Angelou>). O Magazine. Retrieved December 19, 2013.
66. Angelou (1993), p. x.
67. Glover, Terry (December 2009). "Dr. Maya Angelou". Ebony. No. 65. p. 67.
68. Hewlett, Michael (May 28, 2014). "Maya Angelou, famed poet, writer, activist, dead at 86" (http://www.journalnow.com/news/local/maya-angelou-dead-at-age/article_8da80e80-e66a-11e3-bc4c-001a4bcf6878.html). The Winston-Salem Journal. Retrieved November 16, 2014.
69. Cohen, Patricia (host) (October 1, 2008). "Book Discussion on Letter to My Daughter" (<http://www.c-spanvideo.org/program/282075-1>). CSPAN Video Library (Documentary). The New York Times. Retrieved December 13, 2013.
70. Gillespie et al., p. 126.
71. McGrath, Kim (June 2, 2014). "Remembering Dr. Maya Angelou" (<http://news.wfu.edu/2014/06/02/remembering-dr-maya-angelou/>). News Center. Wake Forest University. Retrieved June 2, 2014.
72. Manegold, Catherine S. (January 20, 1993). "An Afternoon with Maya Angelou; A Wordsmith at Her Inaugural Anvil" (<https://www.nytimes.com/1993/01/20/style/an-afternoon-with-maya-angelou-a-wordsmith-at-her-inaugural-anvil.html>). The New York Times. Retrieved December 20, 2013.
73. Younge, Gary (May 24, 2002). "No surrender" (<https://www.theguardian.com/books/2002/may/25/biography.mayaangelou>). The Guardian. Retrieved December 20, 2013.
74. Gillespie et al., p. 9.
75. Berkman, Meredith (February 26, 1993). "Everybody's All American" (<http://www.ew.com/ew/article/0,,305716,00.html>). Entertainment Weekly. Retrieved December 20, 2013.
76. Gillespie et al., p. 142.
77. Long, p. 84.
78. Gillespie et al., p. 144.
79. Letkemann, Jessica (May 28, 2014). "Maya Angelou's Life in Music: Ashford & Simpson Collab, Calypso Album & More" (<http://www.billboard.com/articles/news/6099398/maya-angelou-music-history-ashford-simpson-calypso-album-listen>). Billboard Magazine. Retrieved November 16, 2014.
80. Gillespie et al., p. 10.
81. Williams, Jeannie (January 10, 2002). "Maya Angelou pens her sentiments for Hallmark" (<http://usatoday30.usatoday.com/life/books/2002/2002-01-10-maya-angelou-full.htm>). USA Today. Retrieved December 20, 2013.
82. Alter, Alexander (May 28, 2014). "Author, Poet Maya Angelou Dies". The Wall Street Journal.
83. Gillespie et al., p. 175.
84. Mooney, Alexander (December 10, 2008). "Clinton camp answers Oprah with Angelou" (<http://politicalticker.blogs.cnn.com/2007/12/10/clinton-camp-answers-oprah-with-angelou/>). CNN Politics.com. Retrieved April 4, 2009.
85. Williams, Krissah (January 18, 2008). "Presidential candidates court S.C. black newspaper" (http://voices.washingtonpost.com/44/2008/01/18/presidential-candidates-court_1.html). The Washington Post. Retrieved April 4, 2009.
86. Zeleny, Jeff; Marjorie Connelly (January 27, 2008). "Obama Carries South Carolina by Wide Margin" (<https://www.nytimes.com/2008/01/27/us/politics/27carolina.html>). New York Times. Retrieved April 4, 2009.
87. Parker, Jennifer (January 19, 2009). "From King's 'I Have a Dream' to Obama Inauguration" (<http://abcnews.go.com/Politics/Inauguration/story?id=6665595>). ABC News. Retrieved December 20, 2013.
88. Waldron, Clarence (November 11, 2010). "Maya Angelou Donates Private Collection to Schomburg Center in Harlem" (<http://trendmag2.trendoffset.com/publication/?i=51395&p=14>). Jet Magazine. Retrieved December 20, 2013.
89. Lee, Felicia R. (October 26, 2010). "Schomburg Center in Harlem Acquires Maya Angelou Archive" (<https://www.nytimes.com/2010/10/27/arts/design/27archive.html>). The New York Times. Retrieved December 20, 2013.

90. Weingarten, Gene; Ruane, Michael E. (August 30, 2011). "Maya Angelou says King memorial inscription makes him look 'arrogant'" (https://www.washingtonpost.com/local/maya-angelou-says-king-memorial-inscription-makes-him-look-arrogant/2011/08/30/gIQA1YChqJ_story.html). The Washington Post. Retrieved November 17, 2014.
91. Ruane, Michael E. (December 11, 2011). "Controversial King memorial inscription to be removed, not replaced" (https://www.washingtonpost.com/local/controversial-king-memorial-inscription-set-to-be-erased-not-replaced/2012/12/11/41f2f8b6-43cc-11e2-8e70-e1993528222d_story.html). The Washington Post. Retrieved November 17, 2014.
92. Sayers, Valerie (March 27, 2013). "'Mom & Me & Mom,' by Maya Angelou" (https://web.archive.org/web/20130911041900/http://articles.washingtonpost.com/2013-03-27/entertainment/38068625_1_angelou-vivian-baxter-new-book). The Washington Post. Archived from the original (https://articles.washingtonpost.com/2013-03-27/entertainment/38068625_1_angelou-vivian-baxter-new-book) on September 11, 2013. Retrieved December 20, 2013.
93. Tate, p. 150.
94. Angelou, Maya (1984). "Shades and Slashes of Light". In Evans, Mari (ed.). Black Women Writers (1950–1980): A Critical Evaluation (<https://archive.org/details/blackwomenwriter00evan/page/5>). Garden City, New York: Doubleday. p. 5 (<https://archive.org/details/blackwomenwriter00evan/page/5>). ISBN 978-0-385-17124-3.
95. Toppman, p. 145.
96. Gates, Jr., Henry L. (host) (2008). "African American Lives 2: The Past is Another Country (Part 4)" (<https://www.pbs.org/wnet/aalives/>). PBS. Retrieved December 20, 2013.
97. Angelou, Maya (1986). All God's Children Need Traveling Shoes. New York: Vintage Books. pp. 206–207. ISBN 978-0-679-73404-8.
98. Gates, Jr., Henry L. (2009). In Search of Our Roots: How 19 Extraordinary African Americans Reclaimed Their Past (<https://books.google.be/books?id=0cralRa6tIYC&pg=PA37&dq=maya+angelou+congo+angola#v=onepage&q=maya%20angelou%20congo%20angola>). ISBN 9780307409737.
99. Gates, Jr., Henry L. (host) (2008). "African American Lives 2: A Way out of No Way (Part 2)" (<https://www.pbs.org/wnet/aalives/>). PBS. Retrieved December 20, 2013.
100. Lupton, p. 2.
101. Wolf, Linda (Winter 1995). "Laugh and Dare to Love" (<http://www.context.org/iclib/ic43/angelou/>). In Context Magazine. Vol. 43. p. 45.
102. Gillespie et al., p. 156.
103. Gillespie et al., p. 155.
104. Beyette, Beverly (June 12, 1986). "Angelou's 4-Year Search for Grandson: Kidnapping Spurs Emotional Odyssey" (http://articles.latimes.com/1986-06-12/news/vw-10461_1_maya-angelou). Los Angeles Times. Retrieved November 19, 2014.
105. Lupton, p. 19.
106. Chapman, Michael W (May 28, 2014). "Maya Angelou: 'God Loves Me' – 'That's Why I Am Who I Am'" (<http://www.cnsnews.com/news/article/michael-w-chapman/maya-angelou-god-loves-me-s-why-i-am-who-i-am>). CNS News.com. Retrieved July 30, 2015.
107. Yee, Vivian (May 29, 2014). "Maya Angelou Often Left New York, but She Always Came Back" (<https://www.nytimes.com/2014/05/30/nyregion/maya-angelou-often-left-new-york-but-she-always-came-back.html>). The New York Times. p. A23. Retrieved November 18, 2014.
108. Gillespie et al., p. 150.
109. Pierce, Donna (January 5, 2005). "Welcome to her world: Poet-author Maya Angelou blends recipes and memories in winning style" (http://articles.chicagotribune.com/2005-01-05/entertainment/0501040395_1_angelou-potato-salad-delicious-dessert). Chicago Tribune. Retrieved November 24, 2013.
110. Crea, Joe (January 18, 2011). "Maya Angelou's cookbook 'Great Food, All Day Long' exudes cozy, decadence" (http://www.cleveland.com/taste/index.ssf/2011/01/maya_angelou_cookbook_great_f.html). Northeast Ohio Media Group. Retrieved December 20, 2013.

111. Sarler, Carol (1989). "A Day in the Life of Maya Angelou". In Elliot, Jeffrey M (ed.). Conversations with Maya Angelou (<https://archive.org/details/conversationswit00ange/page/217>). Jackson, Mississippi: University Press. p. 217 (<https://archive.org/details/conversationswit00ange/page/217>). ISBN 978-0-87805-362-9.
112. Angelou (2008), pp. 63–67.
113. "Maya Angelou I Know Why the Caged Bird Sings" (http://www.bbc.co.uk/worldservice/specials/133_wbc_archive_new/page2.shtml). World Book Club (interview). BBC World Service. October 2005. Retrieved December 20, 2013.
114. "Dr. Maya Angelou dead at 86" (<http://www.wxii12.com/news/dr-maya-angelou-dead-at-86/26204272>). Winston-Salem, North Carolina: WXII12.com. May 28, 2014. Retrieved May 28, 2014.
115. Johnson, Guy (June 7, 2014). "Full Remarks: Angelou's son, Guy Johnson" (<http://www.wxii12.com/news/full-remarks-angelous-son-guy-johnson/26380840>). WXII12.com. Retrieved June 16, 2014.
116. "Maya Angelou 'the brightest light' says Barack Obama" (<https://www.bbc.co.uk/news/entertainment-arts-27606776>). BBC News. May 28, 2014. Retrieved May 28, 2014.
117. Jenkins, Colleen; Trott, Bill (May 28, 2014). "U.S. author, poet Maya Angelou dies at 86" (<https://www.reuters.com/article/2014/05/28/us-people-angelou-idUSKBN0E81E520140528>). Reuters. Retrieved May 28, 2014.
118. WBTV Web Staff (May 29, 2014). "Dr Maya Angelou remembered at public memorial service" (<https://web.archive.org/web/20140531124016/http://www.wdam.com/story/25647600/dr-maya-angelou-remembered-at-public-memorial-service>). Winston-Salem, NC, U.S.: Worldnow and WDAM TV. Archived from the original (<http://www.wdam.com/story/25647600/dr-maya-angelou-remembered-at-public-memorial-service>) on May 31, 2014. Retrieved May 30, 2014.
119. "Poet Maya Angelou remembered at memorial service" (http://www.news-record.com/news/article_d143738e-ee65-11e3-a41d-001a4bcf6878.html). News & Record. Associated Press. June 7, 2014. Retrieved June 8, 2014.
120. Tobar, Hector (June 4, 2014). "Maya Angelou's memorial service to be live-streamed" (<http://www.latimes.com/books/jacketcopy/la-et-jc-maya-angelous-memorial-service-to-be-livestreamed-20140604-story.html>). Los Angeles Times. Retrieved June 11, 2014.
121. "PROGRAM NOTE: Maya Angelou, French Open" (<http://www.wxii12.com/news/program-note-maya-angelou-coverage-saturday/26348362#IXsdTo>). WXII. June 7, 2014. Retrieved June 11, 2014.
122. "Maya Angelou memorial service set for Saturday, will be shown live on FOX8 and MyFOX8.com" (<http://myfox8.com/2014/06/05/maya-angelou-memorial-service-set-for-saturday-will-be-shown-live-on-fox8-and-myfox8-com/>). WGHP. June 5, 2014. Retrieved June 11, 2014.
123. Smith, Christie; Cestone, Vince (June 15, 2014). "Maya Angelou Remembered as 'Daughter of San Francisco' at Glide Memorial Church" (<http://www.nbcbayarea.com/news/local/Maya-Angelou-Remembered-as-Daughter-of-San-Francisco--263230081.html>). NBC Bay Area.com. Retrieved June 16, 2014.
124. Lupton, p. 98.
125. Lupton, p. 1.
126. Gilmore, Susan (April 7, 2013). "Angelou: Writing about Mom emotional process" (http://www.journalnow.com/relishnow/the_arts/books_and_literature/article_a103ef34-9f04-11e2-ad1f-0019bb30f31a.html). The Winston-Salem Journal. Retrieved April 14, 2013.
127. "Maya Angelou" (<http://www.poetryfoundation.org/bio/maya-angelou>). Poetry Foundation. Retrieved December 20, 2013.
128. Italie, Hillel (May 6, 2011). "Robert Loomis, Editor of Styron, Angelou, Retires" (<http://www.washingtontimes.com/news/2011/may/6/robert-loomis-editor-of-styron-angelou-retires/>). The Washington Times. Associated Press. Retrieved December 20, 2013.
129. Martin, Arnold (April 12, 2001). "Making Books; Familiarity Breeds Content" (<https://www.nytimes.com/2001/04/12/books/making-books-familiarity-breeds-content.html>). The New York Times. Retrieved December 20, 2013.
130. Tate, p. 155.

131. McPherson, Dolly A. (1990). Order Out of Chaos: The Autobiographical Works of Maya Angelou. New York: Peter Lang Publishing. pp. 10–11. ISBN 978-0-8204-1139-2.
132. Moyer, Homer E (2003). The R.A.T. Real-World Aptitude Test: Preparing Yourself for Leaving Home. Herndon, New York: Capital Books. p. 297. ISBN 978-1-931868-42-6.
133. McWhorter, p. 40.
134. Braxton, p. 4.
135. Long, p. 85.
136. Feeney, Nolan (May 28, 2014). "A Brief History of How Maya Angelou Influenced Hip Hop" (<http://time.com/125901/maya-angelou-rap-hip-hop/>). Time Magazine. Retrieved November 14, 2014.
137. Washington, Elsie B. (March–April 2002). "A Song Flung Up to Heaven". Black Issues Book Review. 4 (2): 56.
138. Brozan, Nadine (January 30, 1993). "Chronicle" (<https://www.nytimes.com/1993/01/30/style/chronicle-575993.html>). The New York Times. Retrieved December 21, 2013.
139. "Maya Angelou, I Know Why the Caged Bird Sings" (<http://www.thefileroom.org/documents/dyn/DisplayCase.cfm/id/796>). National Coalition Against Censorship. Retrieved December 21, 2013.
140. Foerstel, Herbert N. (2006). Banned in the USA: A Reference Guide to Book Censorship in Schools and Public Libraries. Westport, Connecticut: Information Age Publishing. pp. 195–6. ISBN 978-1-59311-374-2.
141. "The 100 Most Frequently Challenged Books of 1990–2000" (<http://www.ala.org/bbooks/100-most-frequently-challenged-books-1990%E2%80%932000>). American Library Association. March 27, 2013. Retrieved December 21, 2013.
142. "Top 100 Banned/Challenged Books: 2000–2009" (<http://www.ala.org/bbooks/top-100-bannedchallenged-books-2000-2009>). American Library Association. March 27, 2013. Retrieved December 21, 2013.
143. Maughan, Shannon (March 3, 2003). "Grammy Gold". Publishers Weekly. Vol. 250 no. 9. p. 38.
144. "Past Winners" (https://web.archive.org/web/20160831204617/http://www.tonyawards.com/p/tonys_search). Tony Awards. Archived from the original (http://www.tonyawards.com/p/tonys_search) on August 31, 2016. Retrieved December 21, 2013.
145. "National Commission on the observance of International Women's Year, 1975 Appointment of Members and Presiding Officer of the Commission" (<http://www.presidency.ucsb.edu/ws/index.php?pid=7247>). The American Presidency Project. March 28, 1977. Retrieved December 21, 2013.
146. "Spingarn Medal Winners" (<https://web.archive.org/web/20140802063355/http://www.naacp.org/pages/spingarn-medal-winners>). NAACP. Archived from the original (<http://www.naacp.org/pages/spingarn-medal-winners>) on August 2, 2014. Retrieved June 7, 2015.
147. "Sculptor, Painter among National Medal of Arts Winners" (<https://web.archive.org/web/2000050417070254/http://www.cgi.cnn.com/2000/STYLE/arts/12/20/national.medal.of.arts/index.html>). CNN.com. December 20, 2000. Archived from the original (<http://www.cgi.cnn.com/2000/STYLE/arts/12/20/national.medal.of.arts/index.html>) on April 17, 2005. Retrieved December 21, 2013.
148. Norton, Jerry (February 15, 2011). "Obama awards freedom medals to Bush, Merkel, Buffett" (<https://www.reuters.com/article/2011/02/15/us-obama-medals-idUSTRE71E60P20110215?feedType=RSS&feedName=topNews>). Reuters. Retrieved December 21, 2013.
149. Glazier, Jocelyn A. (Winter 2003). "Moving Closer to Speaking the Unspeakable: White Teachers Talking about Race" (<https://web.archive.org/web/20050401042033/http://www.calfac.org/allpdf/teqwinter2003/glazier.pdf>) (PDF). Teacher Education Quarterly. 30 (1): 73–94. Archived from the original (<http://www.calfac.org/allpdf/teqwinter2003/glazier.pdf>) (PDF) on April 1, 2005. Retrieved December 21, 2013.
150. Challener, Daniel D. (1997). Stories of Resilience in Childhood. London, England: Taylor & Francis. pp. 22–3. ISBN 978-0-8153-2800-1.

151. Boyatzis, Chris J. (February 1992). "Let the Caged Bird Sing: Using Literature to Teach Developmental Psychology". Teaching of Psychology. 19 (4): 221–2. CiteSeerX 10.1.1.1030.5582 (<https://citeseerx.ist.psu.edu/viewdoc/summary?doi=10.1.1.1030.5582>). doi:10.1207/s15328023top1904_5 (https://doi.org/10.1207%2Fs15328023top1904_5).
152. DeGout, p. 122.
153. Bloom, Lynn Z. (1985). "Maya Angelou". Dictionary of Literary Biography African American Writers after 1955 (<https://archive.org/details/afroamericanwrit0038unse/page/10>). 38. Detroit, Michigan: Gale Research Company. pp. 10–11 (<https://archive.org/details/afroamericanwrit0038unse/page/10>). ISBN 978-0-8103-1716-1.
154. Burr, p. 181.
155. Bloom, Harold (2001). Maya Angelou (<https://archive.org/details/mayaangeloubloom00haro/page/9>). Broomall, Pennsylvania: Chelsea House Publishers. p. 9 (<https://archive.org/details/mayaangeloubloom00haro/page/9>). ISBN 978-0-7910-5937-1.
156. Burr, p. 183.
157. Lupton, p. 29–30.
158. Lauret, p. 98.
159. Lupton, p. 32.
160. Lupton, p. 34.
161. Sartwell, Crispin (1998). Act Like You Know: African-American Autobiography and White Identity (<https://archive.org/details/actlikeyouknowaf0000sart/page/26>). Chicago: University of Chicago Press. p. 26 (<https://archive.org/details/actlikeyouknowaf0000sart/page/26>). ISBN 978-0-226-73527-6.
162. Hagen, pp. 6–7.
163. Walker, p. 92.
164. McWhorter, p. 41.
165. Bloom, Lynn Z. (2008). "The Life of Maya Angelou". In Johnson, Claudia (ed.). Racism in Maya Angelou's I Know Why the Caged Bird Sings. Detroit, Michigan: Gale Press. p. 17. ISBN 978-0-7377-3905-3.
166. O'Neale, p. 32.
167. O'Neale, p. 34.
168. McWhorter, p. 39.
169. McWhorter, p. 38.
170. McWhorter, pp. 40–41.
171. Sayers, Valerie (September 28, 2008). "Songs of Herself" (<https://www.washingtonpost.com/wp-dyn/content/story/2008/09/26/ST2008092601489.html>). Washington Post. Retrieved December 22, 2013.
172. Hagen, p. 63.
173. Hagen, p. 61.
174. Lupton, p. 142.

Works cited

- Angelou, Maya (1969). I Know Why the Caged Bird Sings. New York: Random House. ISBN 978-0-375-50789-2
- Angelou, Maya (1993). Wouldn't Take Nothing for My Journey Now. New York: Random House. ISBN 978-0-394-22363-6
- Angelou, Maya (2008). Letter to My Daughter. New York: Random House. ISBN 978-0-8129-8003-5
- Braxton, Joanne M., ed. (1999). Maya Angelou's I Know Why the Caged Bird Sings: A Casebook. New York: Oxford Press. ISBN 978-0-19-511606-9
 - Braxton, Joanne M. "Symbolic Geography and Psychic Landscapes: A Conversation with Maya Angelou", pp. 3–20
 - Tate, Claudia. "Maya Angelou: An Interview", pp. 149–158
- Burr, Zofia (2002). Of Women, Poetry, and Power: Strategies of Address in Dickinson, Miles, Brooks, Lorde, and Angelou. Urbana, Illinois: University of Illinois Press. ISBN 978-0-252-02769-7
- DeGout, Yasmin Y. (2009). "The Poetry of Maya Angelou: Liberation Ideology and Technique". In Bloom's Modern Critical Views – Maya Angelou, Harold Bloom, ed. New York: Infobase Publishing, pp. 121–132. ISBN 978-1-60413-177-2

- Gillespie, Marcia Ann, Rosa Johnson Butler, and Richard A. Long. (2008). Maya Angelou: A Glorious Celebration. New York: Random House. ISBN 978-0-385-51108-7
- Hagen, Lyman B. (1997). Heart of a Woman, Mind of a Writer, and Soul of a Poet: A Critical Analysis of the Writings of Maya Angelou. Lanham, Maryland: University Press. ISBN 978-0-7618-0621-9
- Lauret, Maria (1994). Liberating Literature: Feminist Fiction in America. New York: Routledge Press. ISBN 978-0-415-06515-3
- Long, Richard (2005). "Maya Angelou". Smithsonian 36, (8): pp. 84–85
- Lupton, Mary Jane (1998). Maya Angelou: A Critical Companion. Westport, Connecticut: Greenwood Press. ISBN 978-0-313-30325-8
- McWhorter, John (2002). "Saint Maya." (<http://www.tnr.com/article/saint-maya>) The New Republic 226, (19): pp. 35–41.
- O'Neale, Sondra (1984). "Reconstruction of the Composite Self: New Images of Black Women in Maya Angelou's Continuing Autobiography", in Black Women Writers (1950–1980): A Critical Evaluation, Mari Evans, ed. Garden City, N.Y: Doubleday. ISBN 978-0-385-17124-3
- Toppman, Lawrence (1989). "Maya Angelou: The Serene Spirit of a Survivor", in Conversations with Maya Angelou, Jeffrey M. Elliot, ed. Jackson, Mississippi: University Press. ISBN 978-0-87805-362-9
- Walker, Pierre A. (October 1995). "Racial Protest, Identity, Words, and Form in Maya Angelou's I Know Why the Caged Bird Sings". College Literature 22, (3): pp. 91–108.

External links

- Official website \(http://www.mayaangelou.com/\)
- Maya Angelou \(https://www.discogs.com/artist/312669\) discography at Discogs
- Maya Angelou \(https://www.imdb.com/name/nm0029723/\) on IMDb
- Maya Angelou \(https://www.ibdb.com/broadway-cast-staff/84766\) at the Internet Broadway Database
- Maya Angelou \(http://www.lortel.org/Archives/CreditableEntity/19129\) at the Internet Off-Broadway Database
- Maya Angelou papers \(http://archives.nypl.org/scm/22986\) at New York Public Library
- Maya Angelou \(http://mayaangelou.wfu.edu/\) memorial service at Wake Forest University
- Maya Angelou \(http://www.aveleyman.com/ActorCredit.aspx?ActorID=435\) (some acting credits) at Aveleyman.com
- Spring, Kelly. "Maya Angelou" (<https://www.womenshistory.org/education-resources/biographies/maya-angelou>). National Women's History Museum. 2017.
- Maya Angelou's Posthumous Album, 'Caged Bird Songs,' Debuts \(https://www.billboard.com/articles/news/6304500/maya-angelou-caged-bird-songs-released\)

Retrieved from "https://en.wikipedia.org/w/index.php?title=Maya_Angelou&oldid=940715555"

This page was last edited on 14 February 2020, at 04:26 (UTC).

Text is available under the Creative Commons Attribution-ShareAlike License; additional terms may apply. By using this site, you agree to the Terms of Use and Privacy Policy. Wikipedia® is a registered trademark of the Wikimedia Foundation, Inc., a non-profit organization.